

You say you need to own a gun but you're not fooling anyone.

A boy, too young to drive, picks it up and
takes it out for show and tell

He murders
a dozen of
his classmates
before turning
it on himself.

And the parents
wonder why.

Was he
deprived?
Abused?
Evil, or ill?

Who's to blame?
The killer? The parents?
The victims? The gun?

You claim to know
the answer
but you're not
fooling anyone.

You say he played video games and listened to music
and watched too much TV.

He wasn't popular
and his parents
made him
take out the
trash once

So he became a Nazi
and no one knew
until it was too late.
But no one
taught him
how to hate.

He just picked it
up somewhere,
like he picked up
the gun?

You're not
fooling anyone.

You live in a house
that you worked hard to buy and you don't talk to your neighbours if you can help it.

There are some kids down the street
who make you nervous
and when a film trailer
warns you to beware,
you believe it.

Because kids today are savage and full of rage
not like you were
when you were their age.

Back then nobody drank or swore because the world had the values
your fathers fought for.

Why can't it be like those days when
law and order
ruled the land?

How did blacks and children
get their hands
on the means to rise up and slay you?
What is your country coming to?

MAYBE
IT'S COMING
TO GET YOU.

Because you built your nation
on the blood of slaves
and those who did not conform to your ways.

You killed for freedom from an absent king
and now you have become that thing.

So you must choose what is worse:
living in fear of those who thirst for the power and money you always put first

Or admitting that those battles fought in ancient times have only taught that might makes right, no matter what.

So if a piece of paper says you have the right to carry ways of executing other men

Will you reconsider when the one who does the shooting is your son?

You'll say there was nothing you could do...

...but you're
not fooling anyone.
